A moment of forgetfulness or absent mindedness by a brakeman who is given the best of reputation by the Wabash officials tells the story of the seconds that preceded the catastrophe. As to the facts themselves there is no room for dispute Freight train No 4, east-bound from Chicago, was due at this point at 4:20 a m. It was under orders to take the aiding and await the arrival of the west-bound passenger express No. 55, which, according to the schedule, should have passed the Kingsbury depot at 4.40. The express, however, was an hour and twenty min-A moment of forgetfulness or absent-Aingsbury depot at 4.40 The express, however, was an hour and twenty minutes late, and, owing to the heavy travel growing out of the World's fair, it was divided into two sections, the second section running twelve minutes behind the first. Both sections were made up at Buffalo, and the passengers included people from that city as well as from the various lines centering there from Canada and the east. With the knowledge that under the schedule he had twenty minutes to spare Engineer Whitman of the freight train proceeded from the adding to the main track to take water, the switch being thrown open by Herbert Thompson, head brakeman of the freight. After the engine had taken water, the freight was backed to the siding and After the engine had taken water, the freight was backed to the siding and Thompson closed the switch Regarding this latter fact there is no room for question For at 5 10 the first section of the express, thirty minutes late, swept past on the main track, giving the usual signal, one long and two short blasts, to intimate to the freight that a second section was following close behind

Like a flash of lightning, therefold, the train took the siding, and almost before the engineer and fireman realized that they had missed the main track that they had missed the main track that whey had crashed into the waiting freight. A second later and the air was filled with shricks, groans, means and pitcous appeals for help and as-sistance

The passenger train consisted of a baggage car, three ordinary coaches and two sleepers. The force of the collision was such that only the rear sleeper escaped injury. The locomotive of the freight was driven half way into the meat car it its rear. The baggage car of the passenger train was thrown to one side, while the passenger coaches partially telescoped cash other and the third, a Grand Trunk coach, cut into the alsecope car "Kancoach, cut into the sleeper car "Kan-ass," carrying away the amoking com-partment and sections one and two sa-clean as though they had been trimmed with a razor-edged are. HE WOULD NOT LEAVE. a Soldier Prisoner Who Climbed a Tree and Defad a Regiment.

It is the custom in the British army that whenever one regiment is transferred from one colony to another prisoners who may be in jail are handed over to the outgoing corps and continue their sentences at the new station. In one case one of these jail birds made up his mind that he would not leave the colony

Private Johnson was one of the smartest men in the corps, and furthermore be was an excellent groom and almost a "cordon bleu." He had one sad failing. He was a thief. His peculations had, however, been generally small, and he had escaped serious punishment. One night a large store in the town was broken into and a considerable amount broken into and a considerable amount of money stolen. It was conclusively proved that Johnson was the thief and he was sent to jail. When the regiment was leaving the colony Johnson, with some other soldier prisoners, was to be handed over according to custom. When, however, his cell was visited it was empty and there was not a sign of Johnson anywhere. A search was made Johnson mywhere. A scarcu was muses in every direction, and at last a prisoner pointed to a coccanut tree which grew in the middle of the prison yard, and there, comfortably seated among the tuft of leaves, was Johnson. The warden at first tried to get the man down by ontal persuagion, then he down by quiet persuasion, then he threatened, then stormed and swore. Johnson laughed contentedly at every mood, but did not move. The fact was reported to the colo-nial secretary, who recommended that the fire engine be called out and the man washed down. The chief of of protection is that a protective tariff is the fre department hardly thought it was consonant with his dignity to wash a prisoner out of a cocount tree, and reported that there was not pressure of water enough to get a stream to the top of the tree. This was probably true, for the tree was a tail one.

The case was again referred to the colonial secretary, who took it before the governor. His excellency was havin Democratic states. It is the difference
